SAN FRANCISCO MILLION DOLLAR MINT TO OPEN

New Location At Market And Buchanan Streets—Old Site To Be Sold

The San Francisco new million dollar United States Mint will be formally dedicated tomorrow afternoon, Saturday, at 3 o'clock.

To construct the great granite, steel and concrete fortress like edifice required twenty months of intensive work.

The dedication ceremonies will take less than an hour.

There will be five brief talks by federal, state and municipal officials, music by the Municipal Band, vocal numbers, with invocation and benediction—all in the inner court of the imposing structure.

In the courtyard outside there will be the fanfare of bugles followed by the raising of the Stars and Stripes to the top of the flagstaff.

From that moment the United States Mint at San Francisco will be officially at Buchanan and Market streets. The old mint at Fifth and Mission streets, where Francis Bret Harte once worked and Ambrose Bierce labored, and billions of dollars in gold and silver were coined in the 63 years of its activity, will be just another piece of federal estate on the market awaiting the highest bidder.

HIGH ATHLETES TO PARTICIPATE IN NCS EVENT

Jeff Takes Third Place In PAL Meet—Olson Breaks 880 Yard Record

The surprising third place of Jefferson High School in the recent P. A. L. championships has given them courage to try for higher honors in the coming Northern Coast Section trackmeet to be held at Stanford Stadium tomorrow, Saturday.

Jefferson had been tabbed by several peninsula papers to score but nine points. However the Jefferson boys really went to town, scoring four first places, a second, third and a fourth for a total of 26 points.

Francis Olson, lanky track star, is Jeffersons best chance to score in the N. C. S. meet which brings to Stanford the greatest high school athletes from Santa Cruz to Eureka and as far inland as Vallejo.

Olson broke the 880 record which had once been held by the versatile Ben Eastman, the greatest middle distance runner the world has ever known, and later held by Menzel of Burlingame. Olson bettered the time of Menzel by three tenths of a second.

Buzzy Wright, Indian speed demon also has a fine chance to cop a place in the big meet.

Several other men including Stanley Simpson, Dale Hilts, Dick Ragni, Elio Fontana and George Balletto will compete and may bring home a medal or two. A gold medal is given for first place, silver for second, bronze for third, and a bronze medal art for fourth place. The meet will commence at 10 a. m.

Polytech Offers Cultural Program

The sight singing and music theory class of Polytechnic Evening High School will present a musical and literary program in the music auditorium of the school, Wednesday evening of next week at 7:45.

Clinton L. Markley, prominent San Francisco attorney, will give a brief talk on "Traffic Laws and Safety," a most timely topic and one which Markley is well qualified to discuss.

Other features of the program will be vocal solos, duets, quartets, ensemble numbers, dramatic readings, Spanish dancing and story telling. Several members of the class who come from foreign lands will sing in their native tongues.

Friends of music, of the class and of the school are invited without charge.

COASTSIDE BUS COMPANY SALE IS ANNOUNCED

New Schedules Will Star—All Equipment To Be Renovated

Purchase of the Coastside Transport Company by Howard Morgan, veteran California bus operator, was announced here this week by Jack C. Humphrey, manager of the line, who will become a director of the new company.

With headquarters in Pescadero, the company operates fifteen buses and trucks, offering daily passenger service between San Francisco and Santa Cruz, via State Highway No. 1, through Sharp Park, Rockaway Beach, El Granada, Half Moon Bay, San Gregoria, Pescadero and Davenport.

Freight and express service is available over the same routes. New and more convenient schedules will be announced soon, and the renovation of all present equipment will be immediately made.

First Evolutionary Steps Of Hoodlum Gangster Sketched In Hit

In one of the most extraordinary sets erected within and beyond the confines of the proscenium arch—the dead end of a tenement street leading to the East River—Playwright Sidney Kingsley has sketched dramatically the first steps in the evolution of the hoodlum gangster in "Dead End," the sensational play which Norman Bel Geddes will present for a limited engagement, beginning Tuesday, May 18, at the Curran Theater, San Francisco, as part of its transcontinental tour. Bayshore Firemen To Dance Tonight

The Bayshore Fire Department will hold its first annual ball this evening at the Voters League Hall on Acacia street. Music by Mel Lyons and his orchestra will start at 9 p. m. and dancing will continue till 1 o'clock.

Arley King, heading the program committee, forecasts that the ball will be one of the outstanding social events of Bayshore this season. Ticket sales indicate that a good crowd will attend the affair.

CELEBRATION FOR GOLDEN GATE FIESTA IS OUTLINED BY VALLEY IMPROVEMENT CLUB COMMITTEE

Rush Preparations For Fun, Frolic, Decorations And Activities

George Allen, president of the Visitacion Valley Improvement Association and general manager of the Visitacion Valley Community Fiesta, announced the fiesta program for the valley at the regular meeting of the improvement association, Monday evening of this week. A program of unusual versatility and interest has been worked out by members of the fiesta committee. Immediate goals of the group are a budget of $750, the costuming of every man, woman and child in the valley and the decoration of all streets and homes.

BOARD REFUSES TO CALL VOTE ON AMENDMENT

District Attorney Rulings Declare Proposals For Changes Illegal

The Board of Supervisors, Wednesday afternoon of this week, refused to call a special county election on June 22 to vote on proposed charter amendments.

Cancellation of the election date followed a ruling by District Attorney Farrell that provision of the recently circulated petitions calling for a special election are illegal.

On motion of Supervisor James a resolution was unanimously adopted which rescinded and vacated an order of the board, made April 14, declaring its intention to call an election on the amendment. James said he was absolutely opposed to calling the election and spending the taxpayers money until all the uncertain legal points have been cleared up through process of law.

HOLIDAY

Supervisor Beer introduced a resolution recommending that the county observe Thursday, May 27, as a holiday. Celebration activities for the Golden Gate Bridge Fiesta will start on that day. The resolution suggested that all county and school employes and workers in private industry be given a vacation May 27.

Bauer To Conduct Federal Symphony

Ben Bauer will conduct the Federal Symphony at the regular concert at the Alcazar Theater on Monday of next week at 8:20 p. m. Bauer is assistant conductor of the symphony and one of the most promising of the young conductors.

Mr. Bacon, district supervisor and conductor of the Federal Symphony, points with pride to this young musician whose outstanding skill and ability as conductor has been fostered on the project. As an assistant and protege to Bacon, Bauer has been afforded an unusual opportunity to advance in his career. Unlike most assistant conductor positions, the one of the Federal Music Project gives plenty of opportunity for actual performance to its assistant conductor. In special concerts and on numerous symphony programs at the public schools, Bauer has met with real success and acclaim by the public. The Monday audience will hear him conduct the Euryanthe overture of Weber, and the Symphony in D minor by Cesar Franck.

After the intermission, Gordon Onstad, tenor, will present three songs: The Adelaide by Beethoven, Il mio tesoro intanto from Don Giovanni of Mozart, and Walthers Preslied from the Die Meistersinger of Wagner.

SCOOPED BY HEARST — The ocean going dirigible Hindenburg has crashed and an investigation is now in progress to determine cause of the disaster. First news of the accident was flashed by Hearst Press to a gullible public who lapped up the "mad sniper" menace story.

On April 4, 1933, the Arkon, huge U. S. Navy airship, was beaten down in a storm off the coast of New Jersey. February 12, 1935, saw the last of the Arkon's sister ship Macon sunk beneath the waves of the Pacific.

For a few days the loss of the Hindenburg threw two nations into an uproar—Germany and the United States. Granted that Hitler is indignant and apprehensive, but why should we worry over German troubles. What we would like to know is, "what actually happened to the Arkon and the Macon?"

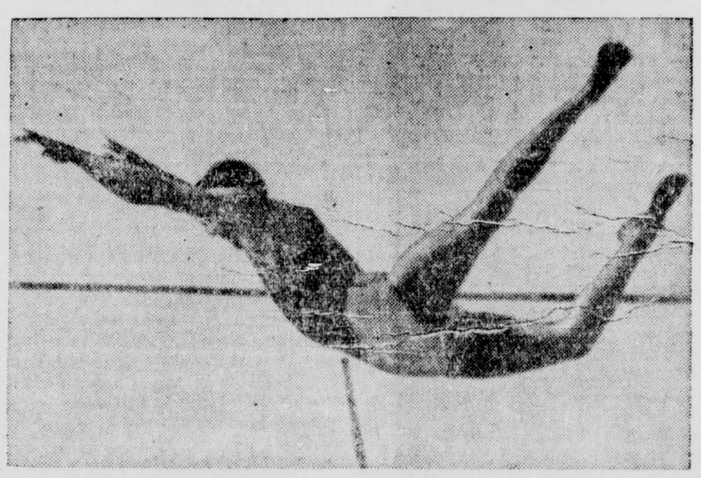
To Lay Cornerstone For Jefferson Hi

At 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon, May 23, the cornerstone of the new gymnasium at Jefferson Union High School will be laid. The Hi band and a capella choir will participate in the program. Dr. Walter Dexter, state superintendent of schools, is expected to be present and will officiate in the ceremonies.

The public is invited to attend the program.

Pole Vaulters Soar To New Record



Bill Sefton, ace University of Southern California pole vaulter, is pictured above in graceful flight as he cleared the bar recently at the record height of 14 feet 8½ inches, breaking his own previous world record by more than an inch. Sefton's amazing performance, a feature of U. S. C.'s 74-56 track triumph over Stanford at Palo Alto, was equaled immediately afterward by his teammate, Earl Meadows. Meadows had never before vaulted higher than 14 feet 5 inches.

BAYSHORE CITY IN CELEBRATION PROGRAM PLAN

Traditional Bonfire Fete By Schwerin Family To Be Held Again

Bayshore Fiesta program in celebration of the opening of the Golden Gate Bridge was outlined in detail, Wednesday evening of this week, when program committees met under the chairmanship of A. J. Taylor.

A contract has been let for the decorating of main streets in Baysore. Flags, banners and bunting is scheduled to go up tomorrow.

Activities for the fiesta week will include wild west exhibitions of bronco busting by Ed Schwerin and his McLaren Park Ranch cowboys, a feature tug-o-war between the fire departments of Bayshore City and Brisbane, revival of the traditional bonfire ceremonies held for many years by the Schwerin family, memorial services sponsored on May 30 by the American Legion and evening fireworks.

On the evening of May 28 there will be a grand costume ball held at the Voters League Hall. The public is invited to attend free of charge.

The San Mateo County Teachers Association held a governing council dinner at San Mateo High School, Monday evening of this week. The general topic of the meeting was teachers salaries. Dr. John Almack of Stanford University and president of the Palo Alto Board of Education was the chief speaker.

Among the teachers attending from Jefferson Union High School were: James Ferguson, principal; Claude Hackley, William Hoppe, Margarie Robinson, Edna Smith, Dorothy Staib, Durant Mosely, Clive Saiz and Hugh Paterson.

TERMINAL UNIT PROPOSED FOR FAIR TOURISTS

Approximately $125,000 May Be Spent To Construct Accommodations

Several live business matters came before the regular business session of the Visitacion Valley Improvement Association, Monday evening of last week, at the Woodmen of the World Hall, 17 Raymond avenue. Of major importance were the discussion of a new $125,000 unit proposed for the valley by the Interstate Motor-Ports, Inc., full reports of the Maytime program to be presented in the John McLaren Park, Sunday, (May 16) and the reports of the fiesta committee.

MOTOR PORT

Mr. Stevens of the Crocker Estates and Mr. Jason of the Interstate Motor-Ports, Inc., explained thoroughly the proposed construction of a Motor-Port at Bayshore boulevard and San Bruno avenue. After the discussion the Improvement Association unanimously voted to concur in the recommendation of the Board of Directors that the Motor-Port be endorsed. This project will bring highly desidable results to the Valley, is the opinion of local leaders and the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce.

RESIDENTS GIVE MAGAZINES AND BOOKS TO SICK

National Geographics Are Popular With Community Hospital Patients

Residents of San Mateo County, when the need for a library for patients at the hospital was made known, gave to the hospital more than 2000 books and periodicals. There was no vehicle with which to cart the books to the patients. A sum of $46.35 was taken from the benefit fund, which to date has totaled only $578, to buy a travelling book cart to make these books available to the patients.

In a recent interview with Mrs. Roberta Cameron, who is helping with the groundwork in establishment of a permanent library for the patients at the community hospital, she said: "The first two or three days I started on my rounds with the books, the patients hesitated, for fear they might have to pay something. I explained that there was no charge, and reading of these books has become a constant feature at the hospital.

"I feel it has done much to lift the morale of the patients. Most of the books, though good, are old, and they ask for the more up to date ones but I manage to sell my wares. There is a great demand for the National Geographic Magazine. No matter how old an issue, they love it. We can never have too many copies of that given us.

Fiesta To Feature Colorful Parades

San Francisco, which loves a parade, will see parades de luxe—the last word in parades—during the Golden Gate Bridge Fiesta, May 27 to June 2, celebrating the opening of the largest suspension bridge in the world.

Thus the parade director, a past master in the art of processional spectacle, prophesied this week.

Two super parades will be the daylight procession in which 100 bands and 150 floats of state and international cavalcades will march in a long and colorful line to Crissy Field at the Presidio on May 27, Pedestrian Day on the bridge, and the illuminated night parade which will blaze a way to Crissy Field on the evening of May 29.

Each of these parades will be marching spectacles of life and light and color and music such as San Francisco in its long history of brilliant street processions has never before witnessed.

Giants to Dish Out Lots of Hard Luck Before Season Ends

PROBABLY the other National League clubs knew it all along, but no matter. It will do no harm—and, incidentally, will be a big help in getting this piece started to remind them to avoid black cats, putting hats on beds, walking under ladders and other innocent seeming yet dangerous pastimes this season.

The reason is the Giants. In spite of occasional spring rumors to the contrary there definitely will be no need for the Cubs, Pirates and Cards to saddle themselves with extra jinxes just to be sure of getting some competition when they come to the Polo Grounds. Instead, judged by what they have showed thus far it is obvious that the league titleholders are going to continue furnishing more than enough hard luck for all other contenders.

By that I do not mean that the mere statistics of early season triumphs over the second-division Dodgers is proof that Bill Terry has another pennant winner. I doubt that he has, but it nevertheless is plain that he does have just such a club as won two flags for him when better opponents faltered.

The team hustles. It is smart. Probably there still is a lack of hitting power — for instance Ott could easily be the difference between first place and fourth—but the Giants still play the league's best defensive baseball. Also they still need only the tiniest opening in an opponent's guard to enable them to slice themselves a victory. Added to that there may have been some improvement here and there. Lou Chiozza is not as finished a third base performer as Travis Jackson, but he has added needed speed. Then Hal Schumacher, who made his mates uneasy each time he went to the mound in 1936, seems back in form.

Bill Terry

But don't go to asking too many questions about the Dodgers. The Brooklyns have so many other worries that it would be unfair to take their minds off their work just so that you can give a good example of what killed the cat. In a word, the Dodgers continue to be the Dodgers.

Manush, so long as his legs hold up, will provide line-drive assistance that the directors would not obtain for the fans twelve months ago. The experienced Woody English probably can combine with young Cookie Lavagetto to produce more double plays than could the keystone combination so generously allotted to the fans by the owners in 1936. Yet the truth is that the improvement is not enough to make any appreciable difference. Like the Ebbets field teams of 1936 and all too many other recent years, the Dodgers just do not have class.

They try hard, just as did the sorely battered outfit which played the second best ball in the league from July 4 on last year. The addition of such fighting veterans as Manush and English makes a difference now just as it would have last spring. There also are schedule blessings, such as the fact that the club meets favored Westerners on the home terrain, before venturing upon a long campaign on foreign terrain.

That may mean—indeed probably will mean—the Dodgers will do relatively well in the early stages of the race. After that weaknesses that were evident to all on opening day and pitching problems that soon must crop up will tell the story.

A summer book rating of the (so-called) Ivy League football teams makes Penn the favorite and Yale the second choice, with Princeton figured to battle Columbia for show money. Incidentally N. Y. U.'s Mal Stevens says that Captain Clint Frank's Yale backfield should be the best seen on an eastern gridiron in many years.

Unsung heroes always are being uncovered at the strangest places and now Princeton has come up with one in the form of a wrestling coach. He is Jimmy Reed, former Lehigh two-time national champion and Olympic star, who produced at least one titleholder during each of the five years he has been at Nassau. His mat teams have been undefeated during the past two seasons in dual meets and the Tigers got so excited about it that 2,700—one of the biggest Princeton indoor sports crowds on record—of them witnessed one meet last winter.

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE:

PRIMO CARNERA has written to a close friend that he is considering returning to this country as a wrestler. . . Judge Landis' favorite dish is Spanish bean soup. . . He refuses to talk about it but wealthy friends insist that Bill Terry's dearest ambition is to be president and part owner of the Brooklyn baseball club. . . One success secret of Jockey Harry Richards, who is riding so many winners this year, is that he never shifts his hands on the reins. It also was a success secret of Isaac Murphy, who probably was the greatest American jockey of all time, and is earnestly recommended to those riders who pester good horses by continually fiddling with the reins.

Fight Manager Jimmy Johnston, Jr., is a candid camera addict. He takes pictures of his babies daily. . . Friends say Paul Schissler undoubtedly would consider an offer to take on a college head football coaching job. Schissler had an excellent record at Oregon State and, considering the handicaps under which he worked, an even better one during his two years with Brooklyn's progridders. . . American leaguers are complaining about Bill Dineen, once a great pitcher and umpire. They say the veteran can't move and is practically no umpire at all when not behind the plate. . . If the Davis Cup committee pairs Bobby Riggs and Joey Hunt for the doubles match against Japan it will be like hitching a dog and cat in tandem, for they have just about that much love for one another. Still, so far as doubles ability goes, it would be a good team and might prove as successful as that celebrated, nonspeaking double-play combination of Joe Tinker and Johnny Evers.

Bob Pastor boxing in California gets a cool $12,500 for meeting Bob Nestell, while waiting for Louis, Schmeling and Braddock to settle their heavyweight mess. . . Frank Kohlbecker, who once caught for the Dodgers, now does a swell job as road secretary for the Cleveland Indians. . . Lefty Weisman, Cleveland trainer, used to sell newspapers in Boston and pal around with a young Red Sox pitcher named Babe Ruth. . . The New York State Athletic commission should give more work to the very able young referee, Frankie Fullam. . . James Corrigan McCarty is on the third freshman crew at Yale. . . The first time, according to his parent, the celebrated Black Hat McCarty, that the famous turf family ever has been mixed up in a boat race. . . Add odd names among pugs—Cardinal Paul, Buck Jones, Demitri Demidri, a new Greek 175 pounder, Fanis Tzantaopulus.

London Defeat Proves Crowding Beats Baer

That London whipping proves once more a statement made repeatedly in this space for the past four years that anybody who crowds Max Baer can beat him. In other words, Max is a long-distance puncher and he lost that one recently because he couldn't keep Farr away.

In spite of persistent rumors, Giants' First Basemen Leslie and McCarthy have nothing to worry about so long as they continue their present good work. Giant officials declare they lost interest in Dolph Camilli of the Phils two years ago. . . They also add that no other deals are contemplated. . . . Casey Stengel, who was deposed so that Brooklyn could have a "fighting" team this season, was called by John J. McGraw "the best winning and best fighting player ever to be with the Giants." . . . Jake Flowers, former Dodger and Card infielder, has written a wrestling scenario which might interest some wide awake movie concern. . . Turfmen, who have high hopes that the present campaign will surpass it, say that New York's best race season was in 1906.

Philip Murray, first vice president of the United Mine Workers of America, also is honorary president of the Keystone Soccer league in Pittsburgh where he once starred at left halfback for the Beadling F. C. . . . Patrick T. Fagan, executive president of District Five of the U. M. W. of A., also achieved his first fame as a soccer player. He performed for the Castle Shannon F. C. when it was winning the Dispatch League championship. . . The most promising of the younger lightweights is an East Side kid named Mickey Farber, who looks much like Tony Canzoneri . . . Clint Hoard, former Brooklyn baseball writer, has given more than 300 baseball talks at colleges, schools, clubs and fraternal organizations during the past three years.

Aldo Spoldi, Italian lightweight champion, praised American fight fans and promoters during an audience with Premier Mussolini. . . . Harry D. Turner will promote wrestling and cycling at the Coney Island Velodrome this summer. . . Boxing and wrestling will be resumed at the Long Beach Stadium this season after a four-year layoff. . . . Joe McKeown, who writes that fine soccer column in the Advance, does just as neat a job when he speaks about the sport on the radio. And why not? . . . For years Joe booted the ball around for some of the nation's best soccer clubs.

GEORGE VI AND ELIZABETH CROWNED

Five Million Voices Cry, "God Save the King!" as Guns Boom Glad Tidings From Historic Tower of London.

London, England.—"God save the King!"

As the great guns of the Tower of London boomed forth the news that the Archbishop of Canterbury had placed the weighty Crown of St. Edward, the Crown of England, upon the head of George VI, the cry came forth in a mighty swell from five million throats as from the throat of one man.

This was the climax of the greatest show on earth, a show for which a generous share of the throng which lined the six and one-half miles of the processional route had waited without moving from their places through the dampness of a London spring night and, indeed, through part of the preceding day.

Those of the King's subjects who had not been able to afford $2 to $250 for a seat that would assure them a glimpse of their new monarch on his proudest day began marking off space along the curb on the afternoon of May 11. Smart alecks who thought they could put off their vigil until sunrise of Coronation Day were doomed to stretch their necks an inch or two in twelve hours of straining to see over several rows of earlier arrivals.

"A Quiet Empire."

It was a heavy day of work at the end of many back-breaking weeks of preparation for the 9,000 gentlemen and ladies of the peerage whose rank and purse entitled them to sit for an entire day in 10 to 25 pounds of clothing per capita, on a hard seat 19 inches wide without ever moving. But it was a magnificent show.

"The Lord give you fruitful lands and healthful seasons," said the archbishop in the benediction which followed the crowning of the King, "victorious fleets and armies, and a quiet Empire. . . "

No one in Britain could deny that in a time of world-wide unrest, a time of urgent necessity for imperial strength and unity, the political expediency of "a quiet Empire" prompted the government to make of this the most splendid coronation in all history. The government expense in the crowning of George VI has been estimated to be double that in the coronation of his father 26 years ago; its backing of the dazzling pageantry required expenditures of $2,620,000 of public funds, not counting an estimated $500,000 spent by the royal household in entertaining royal and foreign guests.

In the vast coronation pageant the government hoped to lend new emphasis to that sentiment which is the real bond holding the empire together, and which is symbolized by the crown and the man who wears it. There is still an undercurrent of dissatisfaction over the abdication of Edward VIII. The new King and Queen must be popularized to the fullest possible extent. The coronation was an opportunity to accomplish this, and the government could afford to let none of it slip past.

The show and the crowd lived up go all advance billing. It was estimated that there were 300,000 visitors who had to cross the ocean. All London's 12,000 hotel rooms were sold out. Souvenir manufacturers and vendors did the expected land office business. The drink bill for toasting the new King was guessed at $10,000,000

Queen Goes First.

Pomp and regal solemnity were byword of the day from the time the King and Queen boarded the coronation coach at Buckingham Palace in mid-morning. Eight magnificent cream-colored horses drew the ancient four-ton vehicle down the streets it has traversed since 1761, when it was built for Queen Anne. In its heavily ornate gold and jewels it carried the spectators back through the pages of history to those days before the American colonies had revolted and prevented the British Empire from including the lion's share of North America.

The ancient coach, a tradition at coronations, bore the royal couple down the mall to the Abbey, where the Queen's procession left the King to enter first, so that she could stand and wait for him by the chairs of state, or recognition chairs, in front of the royal box where the other members of the royal family were seated.

Peers and peeresses were in their places before the central figures of the coronation drama arrived. And before them the real martyrs had assumed their positions. These were the eight newspaper photographers the government had permitted to be present.

Abhoring the thought of flash bulbs marring the solemnity of such an occasion, but still anxious that pictures be taken, officials hit upon a solution. They provided camouflaged quarters for camera men in false pillars and other positions which blended into the background of the Abbey. Narrow slits in the walls of these refuges enabled the cameras to peer out at the spectacle. But the poor "photogs!" They had to be "set up" before anyone entered the Abbey and maintain their cramped positions for eight or nine hours. They were not permitted to withdraw until everyone else had left.

King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, officially crowned in one of history's most spectacular and colorful coronations.

A general color scheme of blue and gold with rich, soft velvet hangings made a brilliant background for the cast and for the spectators in their gorgeous uniforms and gowns. Peeresses wore robes of crimson velvet, trimmed in ermine, unless they happened to be of royal blood, in which event they were required to don the purple velvet of royalty. The court gowns worn underneath were of white, cream, silver or gold. Fashion experts estimated that the most economical of them cost at least $1,200. Uniforms of the men started at about $600 and went up from there.

History's Greatest Gem Display

This did not, of course, include the jewelry or the coronets. The cheapest coronet could hardly have been purchased for less than $100. The total of all the rings, bracelets, necklaces, etc., worn by the 9,000 present must have run into the millions, and was probably the most costly and magnificent display of gems ever worn in one place at one time in the world's history.

The Crown of St. Edward, or Crown of England, made for Charles II in 1662 and worn, because of its excessive weight, for but a fleeting moment by George VI during the coronation ceremony.

Rank of the members of the nobility was indicated by the amount of ermine on the robes of the women and the length of their trains. A duchess was marked by four rows of ermine on her robe, and a train two yards long. A marchioness was permitted three and one-half rows of ermine and a one-and-three-fourths-yard train; a countess half a row less of ermine, half a yard less train; rank was further graded down at half a row and half a yard per classification.

The head of the procession, which had included a great list of dignitaries, the King's representatives and royal persons with their families from all over the world had been waiting at the west door of the Abbey, and as the royal coach approached, filed in to await their monarch. Following them came the chaplains, deans and officers of Westminster, then the archbishops with the Queen consort and the ladies and gentlemen of the court.

Enter the King.

Noblemen close behind bore the staff and the sceptre, with the cross and the golden spurs, and the three swords which signify mercy, temporal justice and spiritual justice. These were the trappings of St. Edward, with which English kings are invested.

Then came more dignitaries, and the King's sceptre with the dove symbolic of mercy and equity; the King's gold and diamond orb, surmounted by the Christian cross; the crown of St. Edward, the patent and the chalice and the Bible.

Then entered George VI in the crimson robes of state, to join his Queen, and march through the choir and up the stairs to the theatre. Passing the thrones, they then kneeled at the faldstools before the recognition chairs to offer prayers. Next they proceeded about the Abbey to all four sides before the view of the assemblage. The King went to his chair and once more faced each side of the Abbey as the Archbishop, in loud tones, announced him.

After the regalia had been brought and placed by the dean of Westminster upon the altar, the Archbishop asked the King, according to ritual, "Sire, is your Majesty willing to take the oath?" and the King answered, "I am willing." He gave his oath to govern the peoples of the British Isles and the Empire according to their laws and customs; to maintain the profession of the Gospel and the Church of England. After he had kissed the Bible and signed the oath, the King repeated and subscribed to the declaration required by parliament and, with the assemblage, prepared for the communion service.

Following this lengthy service, the King, having first removed the cap and robes of state, ascended to the throne of St. Edward, the ancient chair which contains beneath its seat the historic Stone of Scone upon which the kings of Scotland sat as they were crowned a thousand years ago. After a silken pall had been put over the King, the Archbishop anointed him upon the hands, breast and face with the holy oil, and he was ready to be presented with the spurs and the sword.

King Receives His Crown.

These given, George VI removed the pall and was clothed for the first time in the royal robe of purple. The orb and cross were brought from the altar by the Dean of Westminster and placed in the King's hands by the Archbishop. He was next invested with the ring and the sceptres.

Then as the King bowed his head the Dean of Westminster brought the Crown of St. Edward, and the Archbishop, receiving it from him, held it but momentarily upon the head of the King (its weight is terrific).

This was the signal for the trumpets and the guns in the Tower of London, for the peers and peeresses to cry "God save the King!" and for the millions who, along the processional line outside, had been waiting for that moment, to toss their hats in the air and cry likewise, "God save the King!" The peers were now allowed to put on their coronets.

There followed more religious ceremonies of great length and solemnity, and then the coronation of the Queen, following which the peeresses cried, "God save the Queen!" and donned their coronets.

Still more long hours of ceremony. Then, in the early evening the King's coach at last passed once more down the processional route, and the millions who had waited all day for the sight went home happy.

State Spent Own Relief Funds

Washington.—State and local governing agencies in California spent nearly four times more of their own funds for relief and work programs in 1936 than in 1933, according to a report made by Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins. The 1936 total of $30,317,263 compared, he said, with $22,191,599 in 1933.

Yosemite Park Bill Approved

Washington.—The House public lands committee has given approval to a bill authorizing a 7500-acre addition to Yosemite National Park. It amended the measure to compensate three California counties for loss of taxes and to bar any appropriation for the project. It affects Tuolumne, Merced and Mariposa counties.

Six-Month Divorce Bill Passes

Sacramento.—A six-month divorce law, under which interlocutory decrees could be made final at the end of six months in cases where the couples have no minor children, was proposed in a bill adopted by the Assembly. It provides that in cases involving minor children the decree would be in effect for one year, as at present.

19 Will Get Forest Jobs

Nevada City.—Nineteen forestry students will be employed on the Tahoe National Forest during the present field season. DeWitt Nelson, forest supervisor, said three will work as scalers on timber sale operations within the forest and sixteen will be employed as guards, lookouts or protective assistants in the Summer protective force.

Female Barkeep Ban Approved

Sacramento.—A bill which provides no female may tend bar where alcoholic drinks are sold has been approved by the Senate public morals committee. It excepts the wife of the owner of a bar. The committee also recommended passage of another bill which would prohibit a minor from attending a public dance where alcoholic drinks are sold unless accompanied by a parent or guardian.

L. A. Living Costs Jump

Washington.—Living costs of Los Angeles families have increased 3.6 per cent since December 15, the Department of Labor announced, with food prices jumping 9.3 per cent. This is in contrast to national figures of 1.7 per cent for the former and a rise of 2.9 per cent for food costs throughout the nation. The report indicated a far greater rise in all necessary commodities in Los Angeles than in other parts of the nation.

Snow Clearance Cost $100 a Mile

Sacramento.—The cost of removing snow from California highways during the present season will be about $100 a mile, it was estimated by officials of the State highway department. In addition to clearing the highways in storm areas, the work includes repairing damage to roads through slides and the sanding of 2,000 miles of road to eliminate icy conditions. The total cost will be $500,000, representing work on 5,000 miles of road.

Hoeppel Plans New Start

Arcadia.—Former Repreesntative John H. Hoeppel, freed on parole after serving part of a sentence for conspiring to sell a West Point appointment, arrived at his home here, determined to make a new start in life, he said, advocate good government and prison reform and "fight the liquor business." He plans to engage in the publication of a veterans' newspaper and to be active in politics, he said.

Hotel Strike Affects Thousands

San Francisco—Nearly 6000 guests of fifteen strike-bound hotels here awoke to find the employes who usually provide them service circling the buildings in picket lines. There were no bellboys, no chambermaids, no elevator operators and no telephone service. The strike, affecting about 3500 employes in six unions, caught the city's major hotels at the height of week-end activities and forced cancellation of many social affairs.

Mt. Lassen Losing Activity

San Francisco.—Mt. Lassen, the only active volcano in the United States, is gradually dying, according to Dr. Arthur L. Day, director of the geo-physical laboratory of the Carnegie Institution at Washington, D. C. "The possibility of volcanic activity in the Lassen area within the next century is nil," said Dr. Day. "Every bit of evidence points to a cooling of the subterranean fires there. It is quite possible that even thermal activity gradually will dwindle over a period of time."

Highest Laboratory in World Built on Top of Mt. Evans

Protected Against Wind, Lightning and Rats

Denver.—The campus of the University of Denver has been extended up to the peak of Mt. Evans at 14,259 feet. There, at the end of the highest automobile road in the United States, stands the highest laboratory in the world, being some three thousand feet higher than the famous laboratory on the Jungfrau Joch in Europe.

This laboratory is a joint project of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the University of Denver. The building was pre-fabricated in Denver, cut into sections and transported from Denver to Mt. Evans in one day by the use of a nine-truck caravan.

CCC men did yeoman service in carrying 40 sections averaging in weight from 200 to 500 pounds, up the rocky knoll from the terminal of the automobile road to the site of the laboratory. They also constructed the foundation for the building.

Will Stand Wind and Weather.

The laboratory is designed to withstand a wind velocity of 150 miles per hour and to screen out electrical disturbances of this region, which at times cause electric sparks to jump from one's fingertips, ears, and nose, and make the hair stand out like the quills of a frightened porcupine. Also it had to be made as impervious and impregnable to rodents and souvenir-hunting tourists as possible.

To make the structure windproof, side walls were eliminated, while the protection from lightning was accomplished by having the end walls, the roof, and the floor completely surrounded with metal which is connected to ground wires buried deeply in the mountain. This also protects against rodents.

Use of the laboratory will not be limited to research work on cosmic rays. The first work done was that by Dr. Fred D'Amour of the department of zoology, who studied the physiological changes in the rat due to high altitude. The department of meteorology has long desired a station at high altitude where observers could be placed.

Cattle Tick Fever Nearly Wiped Out in United States

Washington.—The areas under federal quarantine against cattle tick fever in the South have just reduced by 28,150 square miles, eliminating all remaining quarantined parishes in Louisiana and leaving under the ban three small blocks in Florida and two larger groups of counties on the eastern and southwestern boundaries of Texas. Total wiping out of the disease in the United States is in sight.

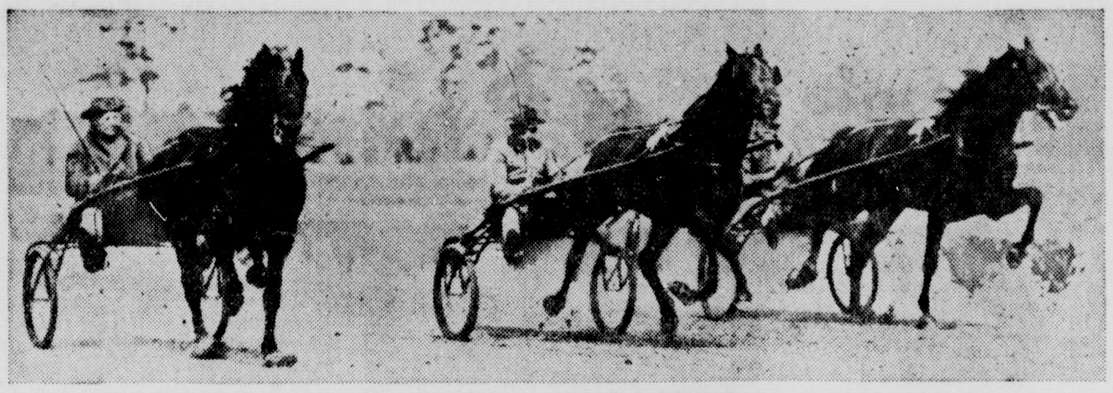
Cattle tick fever is a classic in the annals of bacteriology and medicine because it was the first disease proved to be carried by an insect—or more strictly, in this particular case, a tick; for ticks are not insects. It was in the eighteen-nineties that the late Dr. Theobald Smith, then of the United States Department of Agriculture, followed a "blind hunch" supplied by Texas stockmen and proved scientifically that ticks are the carriers of this disease. Later, it was found that insects as well as other species of ticks are responsible for the spread of many diseases afflicting both human beings and animals.

Dipping and Quarantine.

The United States Department of Agriculture, with the strong co-operation of the states concerned, undertook to eradicate this costly malady of cattle. Two principal means are employed: dipping the cattle in tick-killing baths and forbidding shipment of animals that might be harboring ticks into disease-free areas.

How effective this campaign has been is told by a glance at the Department of Agriculture's "tick map". On July 1, 1906, when the work was first taken in hand, the cattle tick fever area included practically the whole South, plus the southern half of California—a total of 728,565 square miles. The areas left under quarantine now add up to only 33,571 square miles, not much more than the single state of South Carolina.

Three Hambletonian Colts in a Work-Out



Three of the candidates for the $40,000 Hambletonian Stake to be trotted at Goshen, N. Y., in August, limbering up at Seminole park, Longwood, Fla., during a recent work-out. From left, are: Schnapps, driven by his owner, Will N. Reynolds, Winston-Salem, N. C.: Harvere, driven by Will Rosemire and owned by Henry Warwick, New Hamburg, N. Y., and Lawrence D. driven by Ben White and owned by W. N. Reynolds. This trio is expected to be tough to beat on the 1937 Grand Circuit and in the Goshen Derby.

EVERYBODY TEASES PETER RABBIT

"HAD any more dreams, Peter?"

"Tell us about those tracks again!"

"Better find out what's the matter with your eyes, Peter. They see too much!"

This was what Peter heard every time he met any of his friends. They all laughed at him, every one of them, and all because he had tried to tell them that there was a stranger deep in the Green Forest who made tracks ever and ever so much bigger than those of

"Better Find Out What's the Matter With Your Eyes, Peter. They See Too Much."

Bowser the Hound. No one ever had heard of such a thing in the Green Forest, and no one believed Peter. At first they thought he was joking, but when he grew indignant and they saw how very earnest he was they thought that he had been frightened and had imagined that the tracks were a great deal bigger than they really were. Of course they were made by Bowser the Hound, and timid Peter had just thought that they were bigger and different. That's what everybody thought.

So whenever they saw him they teased him until it got so that Peter wouldn't stick his head out of the dear Old Briar Patch until after dark. You see, he didn't like being teased and laughed at. No one does. Of course not. But it was great fun for the others. Once Jimmy Skunk came to the edge of the Old Briar Patch and pretended to be terribly excited.

"I've found some tracks, great big ones, down on the Green Meadows," he cried. "Come with me, Peter, and see if they are like the ones that you saw in the Green Forest."

Right away Peter was quite as excited as Jimmy seemed to be, and he hurried to follow Jimmy down across the Green Meadows, which, you know, were not green then at all, but all covered with snow. Peter was so excited he didn't know what to do. It seemed to him that Jimmy Skunk, who, you know, never hurries, moved slower than ever. "What did I tell you, Jimmy Skunk? Now, perhaps, you'll believe me the next time I tell you a thing," he whispered as they drew near the place where Jimmy said the tracks were.

"Ho, ho, ho! Ha, ha, ha!" laughed Jimmy Skunk. "There are your tracks of the Green Forest, Peter Rabbit. Look at them, so that next time you will know them. Ho, ho, ho! Ha, ha, ha!"

But Peter was too disappointed and too angry to say a word. He just turned his back on Jimmy Skunk and started back for the Old Briar Patch as fast as he could go.

"I don't care," Peter would say over and over to himself when he was alone. "I did see those tracks, and there is a stranger in the Green Forest, and he has got terrible great claws. I wouldn't go up there again for anything! No, sir, I wouldn't go up there again if I was starving and there was no food anywhere, but there. I—I do wish that somebody would believe me."

First Aid to the Ailing House

REPAIRING A GARAGE

NOT long ago a friend told me that the doors of his one-car frame garage were beginning to stick; that he was having more and more trouble in opening and closing them. We examined the garage together, and found that the trouble lay in the rotting of the bottom of the post on one side of the door opening — a timber four inches square. The garage floor was concrete, but at that particular spot water had collected, and the bottom of the post was rotted to such an extent that the whole corner of the garage was beginning to settle.

To repair the damage, we screwed a 2-foot length of a 2 x 4 to the post, with the bottom 18 inches or so above the floor and well above the rotted portion. Putting an automobile jack under this screwed-on piece, we raised the post to its original position, in which the doors opened and closed freely. We then cut off the rotted portion, and replaced it with concrete. For this we built a box of light wood, about 6 inches square inside, directly under the 4 x 4 door-post. This we filled with concrete, using a mixture of 1 part cement, 3 parts of sand, and 6 parts of gravel, with only enough water to make a thick mixture. The box was filled full, so that the concrete came up to the cut-off bottom of the door-post. After three days, the box was removed, and the jack worked to let the door-post come down on its new base. This movement was hardly one-half inch. Protected by the concrete, there is no chance that there will be any further rotting. Later, my friend did the same thing to the post on the other side of the door frame.

The doors of my garage swing outward. In a heavy storm the catch of one of them slipped, and its door was slammed so hard that the horizontal pieces at the top and in the center were broken away from the vertical side piece to which the hinges are attached. At first it seemed that a new door would be required; but before going to this expense, a repair was made that has now stood for four years. The main part of the door was blocked up and the horizontal pieces forced tightly against the vertical side piece. Two 1-inch holes were bored into the edge of the door—through the hinged side piece, and into the end of the horizontal top piece. Two similar holes were also bored through the side piece and into the end of the horizontal piece in the center of the door. One-inch dowels of hardwood were then driven into these holes, and secured by nails. This repair was a complete success. Instead of being put to the expense of a new door, the cost was for four feet of dowel, a few nails, and less than an hour of labor.

A BABE IS BORN

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

A BABE is born, and life begins
With trouble, though it's only pins.
Already culture hovers o'er him
And clothing has provided for him.
If he has been so ill-advised.
He happens to the civilized,
Conspiring persons on the quiet
Already start to plot his diet.

The babe, the boy, and then the man,
They civilize him all they can.
He must have certain fixed persuasions,
And certain clothes for some occasions.
Created in the image of
His God, or something else above,
He soon becomes, while Satan chortles,
The image of all other mortals.

The babe becomes, of many a thing,
A subject, who should be a king,
And life, that should be all enjoyment,
Becomes his regular employment.
And then some day he lays it down,
A stranger in some crowded town,
And often wonders, when it's ended,
If that was just what God intended.

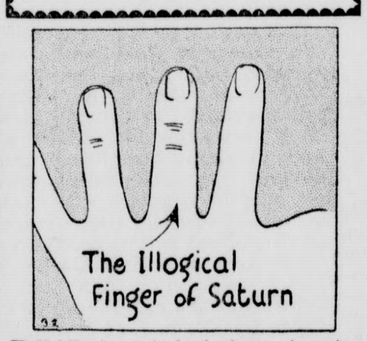
THE LANGUAGE OF YOUR HAND

By Leicester K. Davis

© Public Ledger, Inc.



BEAR in mind, before forming definite conclusions from your study of fingers, that not only the characteristics found in the finger itself must be relied upon for a correct analysis of the inner self; its position on the hand, degree of flexibility, and, second only to shape and length, the inclination toward or away from the fingers next to it are highly significant. Here is the second of seven types of second fingers which you will frequently find in your analyses of hands.

The Illogical Finger of Saturn.

The outstanding characteristics of this type are shortness and thickness. This finger is decidedly pudgy or peglike in appearance. With the fingers closed side by side the tip is found to be even with, or perhaps well below, the tip of the forefinger.

The whole finger has an overfleshed look, although this is most noticeable on the under side of the nail tip. The nail is usually flat and inclined to be dish-shaped, and sometimes appears to be sunk below the surrounding flesh.

The man or woman with this type of second finger can almost invariably be placed as one who does little constructive thinking and finds it extremely difficult to concentrate the mental faculties on matters requiring reflective comparison or prolonged analysis.

If such a finger is unyielding under backward pressure, the indications of a narrowed mentality are emphasized. If overflexible, the mentality is more responsive, though governed by externals.

Of course, with a second finger of this rather disappointing variety, there may be other compensating influences shown elsewhere in the hand. So do not be too hasty in forming a discouraging verdict until the absence of these has been established beyond a doubt.

Why Laxatives Fail In Stubborn Constipation

Twelve to 24 hours is too long to wait when relief from clogged bowels and constipation is needed, for then enormous quantities of bacteria accumulate, causing GAS, indigestion and many restless, sleepless nights.

If you want REAL, QUICK RELIEF, take a liquid compound such as Adlerika. Adlerika contains SEVEN cathartic and carminative ingredients that act on the stomach and BOTH bowels. Most "overnight" laxatives contain one ingredient that acts on the lower bowel only.

Adlerika's DOUBLE ACTION gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old poisonous waste matter that may have caused GAS pains, sour stomach, headaches and sleepless nights for months.

Adlerika relieves stomach GAS at once and usually removes bowel congestion in less than two hours. No waiting for overnight results. This famous treatment has been recommended by many doctors and druggists for 35 years. Take Adlerika one-half hour before breakfast or one hour before bedtime and in a short while you will feel marvelously refreshed. At all Leading Druggists.

"In developing the Coastside Transport Company," said Morgan, "we hope at the same time to contribute our share toward the development of the entire region we serve. There are thousands of San Franciscans who do not know of the beautiful country to be enjoyed along the coast on or near State Highway No. 1.

"By offering these people convenient economical service, we shall help to acquaint them with this scenic beauty. Our first obligation, however, is to the people already living in the coast cities we serve.

MANY AWARDS OFFERED AT NEXT TRAINING CAMP

Citizens' School To Be Held At Monterey Presidio During July

The athletic program at the Citizens Military Training Camp this summer, July 1 to 30, at the Presidio of Monterey, California, will be of considerable magnitude with numerous awards to be offered in all events.

Eleven different types of athletic events are offered from baseball to boxing, wrestling, and track and field events. This program should be of great interest to local high school athletes desiring vacation without cost to themselves. Afternoons throughout the camp period are devoted to sports. The military training offered increases leadership ability of the young man of today and increases his physical development.

AWARDS GIVEN

Awards are offered to first, second and third place men in all athletic events. To promote interest in the team and organizational morale, a beautiful victory wreath is presented to the organization having the largest number of points won in athletic competition.

The above awards are presented to winners on a day at camp designated as Visitors Day, when parents, relatives and friends are invited to attend the ceremonies.

Enrollments for the CMTC are nearing completion, and qualified young men interested therein should contact their local representative for CMTC or the Enrollment Officer at the Presidio of Monterey, California, without delay.

Building Program Hits High Record

The current home building program in Northern California will eclipse the ten year record set in 1936 if the increasing number of mortgages accepted for insurance by the Federal Housing Administration is any criterion.

What is believed to be a national record was established in the local district office during a recent week when 601 cases were processed, involving a total in excess of $2,700,000.

"From the fact that our office insured mortgages at the rate of two and one-half million dollars a week, we glean a fairly comprehensive idea of home building activities actually under way in this district." declared the chief underwriter for the FHA in Northern California. "Never in the history of this office, or to my knowledge in any other insuring office of the Federal Housing Administration, has this figure been approached.

POINT SAN PEDRO ROCKAWAY BEACH

"Pedro Gulch Roars Again!" This was Cass Running's colorful phrase to describe the welcome party given by the Karl Strutzes of the Gulch in compliment for the neighborhood newly weds, Anne and Clyde Garner, Friday evening of last week. Like all festive parties, the Strutz affair started early (p. m.) and ended early, (a. m.) The house on the hill, expanded by the recent addition of a glassed in porch, easily accommodated the 25 guests, their host and hostess and following the lavish supper, provided an ample dancing floor. An enjoyable feature was a song by Grace Danmann. Later a number of guests strolled down to the outdoor fireplace where, seated in a circle, they did some community singing of old favorites. The guests were: Anne and Clyde Garner, Cass and Allie Running, Ada and Roy Schwartz, Jane and Lloyd Simmons, Grace Danmann, Jack Fraser, Becky Johnson, Will and Millie Beeler, George and Kitty Olmo, Clarence and Jo Mohler, Walter and Evelyn Purser, David and Anne Clark and others.

The cat came back! Visitors to the Rees tavern have often seen a black and white cat of odd patchwork markings. But recently the cat has been missing. The Reeses gave Amos away about seven weeks ago and thought the matter was settled. But on Friday of last week, the cat came back and stretched out on the porch. It was evidently glad to be home again. How it had found its way from San Francisco, down the highway and back to Pedro is a mystery.

Slides on the new highway in the cut between Rockaway and Pedro have delayed the work, but they are now cleared away. Several big dynamite blasts just beyond Pedro mountain made things jingle on Tuesday of this week.

Localities as near to the sea as our coast towns, are not supposed to have any dangerous poisonous snakes, but, Friday of last week, there was a three foot rattler sprawled out on the highway between Pedro and Rockaway as Pat Dempsey drove along in his truck. He stopped and went back, but before he could kill it, the rattler darted into the brush and was lost to sight.

BIG JOB FOR COOKS

From a roster of 1115 clubs of every type and character, the biggest invitational list ever prepared in its history, San Francisco will hold a civic luncheon on May 26 under the auspices of the Advertising Club to inaugurate the Golden Gate Bridge Fiesta, May 27 to June 2.

En Route To Philippine Command

Bound for Manila to assume his post as military adviser to the Philippine Commonwealth, Major General Douglas MacArthur, former Chief of Staff of the U. S. Army, is pictured above with his bride of a few days as they stopped over recently in San Francisco. Major General MacArthur and his wife, the former Jean Faircloth of Nashville, made a honeymoon trip to the coast by airplane after their wedding in New York.

TIRE INFLATION

Under-inflated tires cause the weight of the car to be transmitted to the fabric or cord carcass and cause extreme flexing or bending of the tire sidewall. This may cause a pinched tube, resulting in a slow leak or complete blow-out.

If the weight of a car is greater than the tire is designed to carry the strain cannot be eliminated by increasing air pressure beyond the recommended maximum.

BRAKING TECHNIQUE

Don't expect the brakes to last a lifetime if it is your practice to exert a steady pressure on the pedal to bring the car to a stop from high speed.

The correct braking technique, looking at it from the standpoint of long brake life, is to "snub" the brakes just as you would do on a long steep hill to keep the car from picking up excessive speed.

Pedestrian Day Is To Be May 27

The Golden Gate Bridge will be thrown open to the public for the first time on Pedestrian Day, May 27, when the Golden Gate Bridge Fiesta begins a week of festivities.

The longest single span in the world will be opened simultaneously on both the San Francisco and Marin sides at 6 a. m. and will be closed at 6 p. m.

No vehicles will be allowed on the bridge on Pedestrian Day. The bridge is to be dedicated and formally opened to traffic on May 28 with elaborate ceremonies at the Waldo approach in Marin County, the San Francisco Toll Plaza and at Crissy Field.

The two 10½ foot sidewalks will give the public an opportunity to cross on one side of the bridge and walk back on the other, if they so desire.

It is estimated by bridge officials that a crowd of more than 100,000 will view the bridge on Pedestrian Day and arrangements are being made with the military authorities, the State Highway Patrol and San Francisco and other police departments to handle the situation.

Jeff Loses Ball Game To San Mateo

The Jefferson championship bound baseball nine received a setback when they were defeated by San Mateo 3 to 1, Friday of last week.

Jefferson was coasting along with a one run lead in the early stage of the game, by virtue of a single by Jack Haran and a rousing three bagger by pitcher Ed Owens. However, as the fifth inning opened the Indians were met by a barrage of hits which netted three runs and the ball game.

Ed Owens, Indian pitcher, allowed only four hits while Jefferson collected nine. However, San Mateo converted their four hits into enough runs to win the game.

will also be a matinee performance on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

Those who visit the Curran Theater will see a stage transformed into a panorama of the sordid slums, with piers replacing the footlights, the orchestra pit providing a boundary of dank, murky river water swishing against the wharves. This is Norman Bel Geddes' tremendously realistic setting for "Dead End," in which a group of New York gutter snipes show graphically the influence of environment in the making of a criminal.

These lads emerge dripping with the scum of the river to wallow in the filth of the tenement. They talk the jargon of the streets and to them "Babyface Martin, a yellow killer with eight notches to his gun, is a hero. It is the slinking return of the gangster to the haunts of his youth that provides the gripping melodrama of "Dead End," even as the steady progress of unrestrained youth towards the reform school, and worse, provides the social import of this powerful and stirring play.

BOWS TO INDUSTRY

California merchants, manufacturers and industrialists will display their wares to the million and more visitors to San Francisco during the Golden Gate Bridge Fiesta, May 27 to June 2. The exhibition will be held in Dreamland Auditorium.

tractive courts from New York to San Francisco, 250 miles apart, so that the average American family may be able to afford visiting both the 1939 World Fair in New York City and the 1939 Golden Gate Exposition in San Francisco. The court in Visitacion would be the end of the chain. Since these courts are of highest type it is expected that Visitacion Valley will materially profit by the construction.

MAYTIME PROGRAM

Reports revealed that final details have been worked out on the Maytime Program to be presented in John McLaren Park tomorrow. Groups of children will put on a colorful spectacle with three maypoles. The full 34 piece San Francisco Municipal Band, Phil Sapiro leader, will give a two hour program of music. The coronation of a queen will also be a feature of this gala event.

Fiesta plans are well in hand. Particulars of the program appear on page one of this paper.

For the educational program of the evening the group witnessed the motion picture, "Remember Jimmy", which the Fireman's Fund Insurance Company has dedicated to traffic accident prevention.

Visitacion Resident Passes Last Week

Miss Martha Frahm, who has resided for some time with relatives at 948 Visitacion avenue, passed away last week following a long illness. Funeral services were held from Lasswell and Company.

Below is published a poem written by V. L. Happy in memory of Martha Frahm.

IN MEMORIAM

She walked along the road of life
In sweet tranquility,
And seemed to know her footsteps trod
The path to immortality.

Just yesterday, it seems, she smiled
As she went by,
When day was blessed with warm, bright sun
And fair blue sky.

A shorter road she walked than most
To where the willows lend
Their lacy patterned shadows soft
To hide the roadway bend.

Around the bend, past willow trees
She's gone beyond our view.
But where she walks the road is fine,
And skies are always blue.

Indoor Picnic

The Bonvitas Club, Inc. will sponsor an indoor picnic this evening at their new hall, 111 Raymond avenue. There will be games and dancing and it is expected that the affair will be well attended.

Activities At Valley Community Center

The Visitacion basketball team that played with Portola Recreation League was given a dinner at Visitacion Valley Community Center recently to celebrate their exceptionally good season.

They were tied for second place in the league and will soon receive a cup as an award.

The outstanding players of this team were Mel Peterson, James Coen, Tony Klotovich, Lawrence Herger and Bruno Lavezzo.

The boys have accepted a challenge to play the combined teams of the valley in the near future.

Cub Pack Number 47 enjoyed a week end hike to Camp Lilenthal at Fairfax in Marin County, Saturday and Sunday of last week.

Fourteen boys made the trip. The majority of the boys had a new experience in cooking their own food.

The Visitacion Reds won the Visitacion Valley Basketball League contest with four wins and no losses. The Captains of Bayview were second with three wins and one loss and the Bayview Jeeps and the Visitacion Blues were tied for third place.

The second half of the league contest is now under way.

Visitacion Valley Community Center groups honored their mothers by presenting a Mothers Day program, last Sunday.

The children's department presented a play under the direction of Mrs. Helen Moore, music by Mr. Albers. Dance numbers were under the direction of Miss Jean Peterson.

In addition to the younger members part in the program, a tribute was given the mothers by Mrs. Rossi, soloist, and Mrs. Emma James, who recited an original poem written by her for the occasion.

Guest speakers for the day were Father Schmidt of the Church of Visitacion and Reverend Silazzi, St. James Presbyterian church.

Last Saturday the young folks of Visitacion Valley held their first big joint club event of the year, sponsored by the clubs of Visitacion Center. In addition to dancing, guests enjoyed visiting the various booths in charge of energetic young folks representing the following clubs: Panthers, Brownies, Girl Scouts, Coeds, Boy Scouts, senior boys clubs and senior girls clubs.

During the evening, a boxing exhibit, dance numbers, musical numbers and a variety of other acts were presented.

$1,700,000 Spent For Conservation

Over $1,700,000 have already been distributed to California farmers for their participation in the 1936 agricultural conservation program, according to the secretary of the State Agricultural Conservation Committee, with headquarters in Berkeley.

Of this amount, over $1,600,000 went to farmers for diverting their cropland from soil depleting crops to soil conserving crops and for carrying out approved soil building practices.

Over $40,000 of the total payments thus far distributed have gone to stockmen for carrying out approved range building practices under the range improvement phase of the 1936 AAA conservation program.

BIG WHEAT CROP

The department of agriculture this week forecast a winter wheat crop of 654,295,000 bushels, the largest since 1931.

BAYSHORE NEWS

Miss May Riley celebrated her twenty-first birthday, Friday of last week, at a party held in the Protective Association Hall. Some 20 guests gathered there for an evening of dancing and festivity.

memorating the discovery of Visitacion Rock. Fred Endelin is directing the cast of more than 90 persons, who will present one of the most stirring historical pageants ever seen in this locality.

Following the pageant a dedicatory ceremony by the two local parishes will be held. It is expected that the Spanish consul and other notables will be present at the Visitacion Valley Sunday exercises.

OPEN HOUSE

On Monday, May 31, open house will be held at the Visitacion Valley Center, Bonvitas Hall and Woodmen of the World Hall. At this time there will be outdoor and indoor dancing for residents and guests.

Tuesday, June 1, will feature a second pageant at the Community Center, followed by ballroom dancing. Vaudeville and other attractive features will be under way at Bonvitas Hall on this evening.

As a fitting climax to the festivities a grand costume ball is planned for Wednesday evening, June 2. Prizes for the best costumes will be presented.

Home In Community Is P. T. A. Theme

Having planned the year program around the home, members of the Visitacion Valley Parent Teacher Association felt that they could choose no better theme than that of the National Congress which is "The Place of the Home in the Community." It will be developed by panel discussions, speakers, member participation, and demonstrations by the school children. Fathers night is being planned for September when the new auditorium will be completed. A parent education class will be held in the autumn.

Mrs. William Nutter, historian, was given a certificate of merit by Second District C. C. P. T. at the April meeting.

The vacancy left by the resignation of the financial secretary, Mrs. Walter Ayres, will be filled by the executive board when it meets in the school library, Monday of next week, at 1:30 p. m.

Bank Winner

Mrs. George Rua of 185 Teddy avenue won $60 recently at a bank night drawing at the Bayshore Theater.

Springerle

4 eggs
1 pound flour
2 tablespoonfuls anise seed
1 pound powdered sugar
3 level teaspoonfuls baking powder

Beat egg yolks and whites separately, then together until creamy; add sugar, slowly beating until bubbles appear. Sift the baking powder with the flour thoroughly, then add the anise seed. Add slowly to the above mixture and mix well. Let stand for four hours in a cool place. Roll out, cut into fancy shapes and place on sheets of paper to dry. Bake in slow oven.

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure.

When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

DOAN'S PILLS

THE GARDEN MURDER CASE By S.S. VAN DINE

COPYRIGHT S.S. VAN DINE W.N.U. SERVICE

CHAPTER XIII
—18—

Vance seemed profoundly puzzled and said nothing for some time. Then he glanced up suddenly.

"How much light was there in the room?" he asked.

"Only a dim shaded night-light by my bed."

"In that case, you might conceivably have mistaken an empty bottle for one filled with a colorless fluid."

"Yes, of course," the nurse returned reluctantly. "That must have been the case. Unless . . ." Her voice trailed off.

"Tell me, when did you discover that all the medicine was gone?" Vance asked.

"Shortly before Doctor Siefert arrived this morning. I moved the bottle when I was arranging the table, and realized it was empty."

"I think that will be all just now, Miss Beeton." Vance glanced at the girl sombrely and then turned away. "Really, y' know, I'm deuced sorry. But you'd better not plan on leaving here just yet. We will undoubtedly want to see you again today."

Heath, who had been waiting in the passageway for the girl's dismissal, came in to report that Siefert and Doremus had departed, and that Floyd Garden had made the arrangements for the removal of his mother's body.

"And what do we do now, Mr. Vance?" Heath asked.

"Oh, we carry on, Sergeant," Vance was unusually serious. "I want to talk to Floyd Garden first. Send him up. And call one of your men; but stay on the job downstairs yourself till he arrives. We may get this affair cleared up today."

Footsteps sounded in the passageway, and Floyd Garden entered the study. He appeared deeply shaken. "I can't stand much today. What do you want?"

"We understand just how you feel," Vance said. "It was not my intention to bother you unnecessarily. But if we are to get at the truth, we must have your co-operation."

"Go ahead, then," Garden mumbled.

"We must have as many details as possible about last night. Did your expected guests come?"

Garden nodded cheerlessly. "Oh, yes. Zalia Graem, Madge Weatherby, and Kroon."

"Was there any one else here?"

"No, that was all."

"Which of your visitors arrived first?"

Garden took the pipe from his mouth and looked up swiftly.

"Zalia Graem. She came at half-past eight, I should say. Why?"

"Merely garnerin' facts," Vance replied indifferently. "And how long after Miss Graem came in did Miss Weatherby and Kroon arrive?"

"About half an hour. They came a few minutes after Miss Beeton had gone out."

Vance returned the man's steady scrutiny.

"What time did your guests depart?" he asked.

"A little after midnight. Sneed brought in sandwiches about half-past eleven. Then we had another round of highballs."

"Miss Beeton had returned by then, of course?"

"Yes, long before that. I heard her come in about eleven."

"And after your guests had gone, what did you do?"

"I sat up for half an hour or so, had another drink and a pipe; then I shut up the front of the house and turned in."

Vance lighted another cigarette, took several deep inhalations on it, and settled himself deeper in the chair.

"To go back a bit," he said casually. "The sleeping medicine Doctor Siefert prescribed for your mother seems to constitute a somewhat crucial point in the situation. Did you have occasion to give her a dose of it while the nurse was out?"

Garden drew himself up sharply and set his jaw.

"No, I did not," he said through his teeth.

Vance took no notice of the change in the man's manner.

"The nurse, I understand, gave you explicit instructions about the medicine before she went out. Will you tell me exactly where this was?"

"In the hall," Garden answered with a puzzled frown. "Just outside the den door. I had left Zalia in the drawing-room and had gone to tell Miss Beeton she might go out for a while. I waited to help her on with her coat. It was then she told me what to do in case the mater woke up and was restless."

"And when she had gone you returned to the drawing-room?"

"Yes, immediately." Garden still looked puzzled. "That's exactly what I did. And a few minutes later Madge and Kroon arrived."

There was a short silence during which Vance smoked thoughtfully.

"Tell me, Garden," he said at length, "did any of your guests enter your mother's room last night?"

Garden's eyes opened wide: color came back into his face, and he sprang to his feet.

"Good God, Vance! Zalia was in mother's room!"

Vance nodded slowly. "Very interestin'. Yes, quite . . . I say, do sit down. Light your beastly pipe, and tell us about it."

Garden hesitated a moment. He laughed harshly and resumed his seat.

"Damn it! You take it lightly enough," he complained. "That may be the whole explanation."

"One never knows, does one?" Vance returned indifferently. "Carry on."

Garden had some difficulty getting his pipe going again.

"It must have been about ten o'clock," he said at length. "The mater rang the little bell she keeps on the table beside her bed, and I was about to answer it when Zalia jumped up and said she would see what the mater wanted."

"And did you yourself go into your mother's room at any time during Miss Beeton's absence?"

"No, I did not!" Garden looked defiantly at Vance.

"And you're sure that no one else entered your mother's room during the nurse's absence?"

"Absolutely."

"And who was it," Vance went on, "that first suggested going home?"

Garden pondered the question.

"I believe it was Zalia."

Vance got up.

"Awfully good of you, Garden, to let us bother you with these queries at such a time," he said kindly. "We're deuced grateful . . . You won't be leaving the house today?"

Garden shook his head as he too stood up.

"Hardly," he said. "I'll stay in with father. He's pretty well broken up."

Garden went morosely from the room.

When he had gone Vance stood for a moment in front of Markham, eyeing him with cynical good-nature.

"Not a nice case, Markham. As I said."

He moved toward the window and looked out. "But I have things pretty well in hand. The pattern is shaping itself perfectly. I've fitted together all the pieces, Markham—all but one. And I hold that piece too, but I don't know where it goes, or how it fits into the ensemble."

Markham looked up. "What's the piece that's bothering you, Vance?"

"Those disconnected wires on the buzzer. They bother me frightfully. I know they have a bearing on the terrible things that have been going on here . . ." He turned from the window and walked up and down the room several times, his head down, his hands thrust deep into his pockets. "Why should those wires have been disconnected?" he murmured, as if talking to himself. "How could they have been related to Swift's death or to the shot we heard? There was no mechanism. No, I'm convinced of that. After all, the wires merely connect two buzzers . . a signal . . . a signal between upstairs and downstairs . . a signal—a call—a line of communication . . ."

Suddenly he stopped his meditative pacing. He was now facing the door into the passageway and he stared at it as if it were something strange—as if he had never seen it before.

"Oh, my aunt!" he exclaimed. "My precious aunt! It was too obvious." He wheeled about to Markham, a look of self-reproach on his face. "The answer was here all the time," he said. "It was simple—and I was looking for complexities . . . The picture is complete now, Markham. Everything fits. Those disconnected wires mean that there's another murder contemplated."

He led the way downstairs. Heath was smoking gloomily in the lower hall.

"Sergeant," Vance said to him, "phone Miss Graem, Miss Weatherby, Kroon — and Hammle. Have them all here late this afternoon—say six o'clock."

"They'll be here, all right, Mr. Vance," Heath assured him.

"And Sergeant, as soon as you have taken care of this, telephone me. I want to see you this afternoon. I'll be at home. But wait here for Snitkin and leave him in charge. No one is to come here but those I've asked you to get, and no one is to leave the apartment. And, above all, no one is to be permitted to go upstairs either to the study or the garden . . . I'm staggerin' along now."

"I'll be phoning you by the time you get home, Mr. Vance."

Vance went to the front door, but paused with his hand on the knob.

"I think I'd better speak to Garden about the gathering before I go. Where is he, Sergeant?"

"He went into the den when he came downstairs," Heath told him with a jerk of the head.

Vance walked up the hall and opened the den door. I was just behind him. As the door swung inward and Vance stepped over the threshold, we were confronted by an unexpected tableau. Miss Beeton and Garden were standing just in front of the desk, outlined against the background of the window. The nurse's hands were pressed to her face, and she was leaning against Garden, sobbing. His arms were about her.

At the sound of Vance's entry they drew away from each other quickly. The girl turned her head to us with a sudden motion, and I could see that her eyes were red and filled with tears. She caught her breath and, turning with a start, half ran through the connecting door into the adjoining bedroom.

"I'm frightfully sorry," Vance murmured. "Thought you were alone."

"Oh, that's all right," Garden returned, although it was painfully evident the man was embarrassed. "But I do hope, Vance, you won't misunderstand. Everything, you know, is in an emotional upheaval here. I imagine Miss Beeton had all she could stand yesterday and today, and when I found her in here she seemed to break down, and—put her head on my shoulder."

Vance raised his hand in good-natured indifference.

"Oh, quite, Garden. A harassed lady always welcomes a strong masculine shoulder to weep on. Most of them leave powder on one's lapel, don' y' know; but I'm sure Miss Beeton wouldn't be guilty of that . . . Dashed sorry to interrupt you, but I wanted to tell you before I went that I have instructed Sergeant Heath to have all your guests of yesterday here by six o'clock this afternoon. Of course, we'll want you and your father here, too. If you don't mind, you might help the sergeant with the phone numbers."

"I'll be glad to, Vance," Garden returned. "Anything special in mind?"

Vance turned toward the door.

"Yes. Oh, yes. Quite. I'm hopin' to clear this matter up later on. Meanwhile I'm running along. Cheerio." And he went out, closing the door.

As we walked down the outer hall to the elevator, Vance said to Markham somewhat sadly: "I hope my plan works out, I don't particularly like it. But I don't like injustice, either . . ."

We had been home but a very short time when Sergeant Heath telephoned as he had promised. Vance went into the anteroom to answer the call and closed the door after him. A few minutes later he rejoined us and, ringing for Currie, ordered his hat and stick.

"I'm running away for a while, old dear," he said to Markham. "In fact, I'm joining the doughty sergeant at the homicide bureau. But I sha'n't be very long. In the meantime, I've ordered lunch for us here."

"For Heaven's sake, Vance, what are you planning?"

"I'm plannin' to entice the murderer into making one more bet—a losing bet . . . Cheerio." And he was gone.

It was a little after half-past two when Vance returned to the apartment.

"Everything is in order," he announced as he came in. "There are no horses running today, of course, but nevertheless I'm looking forward to a big wager being laid this evening. If the bet isn't placed, we're in for it, Markham. Everyone will be present, however. The sergeant, with Garden's help, has got in touch with all those who were present yesterday, and they will foregather again in the Gardens' drawing-room at six o'clock . . ." He glanced at his watch and, ringing for Currie, ordered our lunch.

"If we don't tarry too long at table," he said, "we'll be able to hear the second half of the Philharmonic programme. Melinoff is doing Grieg's piano concerto."

But Markham did not go with us to the concert. He pleaded an urgent political appointment at the Stuyvesant club, but promised to meet us at the Garden apartment at six o'clock.

Sergeant Heath was waiting for us when we reached the apartment.

"Everything's set, sir," he said to Vance; "I got it here."

Vance smiled a little sadly. "Excellent, Sergeant. Come into the other room."

Heath picked up a small package wrapped in brown paper, which he had evidently brought with him, and followed Vance into the bedroom. Ten minutes later they both came back into the library.

"So long, Mr. Vance," Heath said, shaking hands. "Good luck to you." And he lumbered out.

We arrived at the Garden apartment a few minutes before six o'clock. Detectives Hennessey and Burke were in the front hall.

Vance nodded to them and started up the stairs.

"Wait down here for me, Van," he said over his shoulder. "I'll be back immediately."

BANG! BANG!

Co-Ed—What's the principal athletic exercise in the Chicago schools?

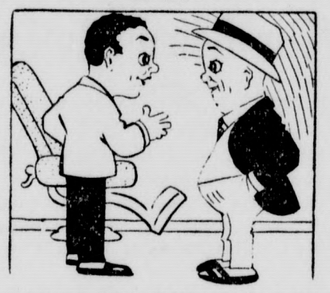
Coach—Putting the shot, I think.

MOST IMPORTANT

Mr. W.—I'm tired of looking around, I think the last house will suit us very well. Let's take it.

Mrs. W.—Just a minute, Hubby dear we have not asked the cook how she likes it yet.

PULLING THINGS



Friend—Now that you've pulled Tom's teeth I suppose you're through with him?

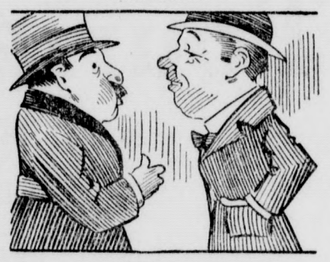
Doctor—Not yet—the bill has yet to be extracted, you know.

IN THE STONE AGE

Serpent—What was that smoke I saw coming out of our house?

Eve—Adam was smoking a shirt I made for him out of a nasty tasting weed.

IN THE SPRING TIME



"How is your wife?"

"Her head troubles her a great deal."

"Do you think she has neuralgia?"

"No; she can't decide upon the kind of new hat she wants."

AYE, THAT'S THE RUB

Mrs. Knagg—Women have suffered everything.

Mr. Knagg—Everything but one thing—the torture of keeping silent.

UP-TO-DATE

"Did Jones die a natural death?"

"Yes, an airplane landed on him."

Parading the Fashions

A STYLE show De Luxe for De Ladies on this De Lightful Spring day!

Betty Ann feels just a bit the most elegant of the three for her housecoat is superlative. She has "skirts" like the ladies in the feminine yesterdays; her basque is form-fitting; her sash has a bow, and her sleeves puff. The illusion is so perfect that she is about to reach for smelling salts or a sprig of old lavender.

Matrons Have Vanity, Too.

Mama, very young for her years, can not resist styles that bring more compliments her way. The no-belt feature of this one is definitely new, and does wonders for the figure a bit past the slim stage. The continuing collar, which in soft pastels is always flattering, gives the break required by the all-in-one waist and skirt. The fitted top and flaring bottom make for style plus comfort, a demand matrons, even though youthful, always make.

Parties and Picnics.

Winifred on the left is privately making up her mind to have a housecoat, too; though she is mightily pleased with the way her print has turned out. She chose this style because the fitted, broken waist line and front seamed skirt are so very slenderizing. She's on her way to the 4-H meeting now and has only stopped to remind Betty Ann of the picnic "The Jolly Twelve" are having on Tuesday.

The Patterns.

Pattern 1285 comes in sizes 12-20 (30 to 40). Size 14 requires 3¾ yards of 39 inch material.

Pattern 1282 is for sizes 14-20 (32 to 44 bust). Size 16 requires 5⅝ yards of 39 inch material. It requires 2½ yards of ribbon for tie belt.

Pattern 1983 is for sizes 36 to 50. Size 38 requires 5⅜ yards of 39 inch material. With the short sleeves it requires only 5 yards of 39 inch material.

New Pattern Book.

Send for the Barbara Bell Spring and Summer Pattern Book. Make yourself attractive, practical and becoming clothes, selecting designs from the Barbara Bell well-planned, easy-to-make patterns. Interesting and exclusive fashions for little children and the difficult junior age; slenderizing, well-cut patterns for the mature figure; afternoon dresses for the most particular young women and matrons and other patterns for special occasions are all to be found in the Barbara Bell Pattern Book.
